Grace, what do you think? I mentioned this to Michelle earlier and she sees them but I have to admit I don't but I'm pretty much in my office or meetings...

Just wondering if security might patrol the floors a little more ?? I never see them and that might make people feel safer.

Thanks Melanie, as Howard may have confirmed already – we haven't assumed we have the answer; we are taking great caution that we address any potential scenario. Thanks for passing this along.

Just so you know, the memo from yesterday seems to be generating lots of hall chat, etc. Many women have expressed feeling fearful. I mentioned this to Deb as well. Not sure that there is a solution.

Below is one example email that I am passing along. I had several people ask if we knew what floor this was happening on – I responded with the request that they be watchful and report any suspicious behavior.

I had one employee report that her house keys were stolen off her desk on Jan. 31st and she had to have her locks changed – she also said that “this place is getting strange so I am going to apply for the buy out.”

Melanie,

I received the below questions from a staff person. I thought they raised some good points that perhaps might be worth passing along. OR, perhaps all of this was already taken into consideration by management, as well as John Nicoletti.

I was wondering, have you heard anything about the process management used to determine the bad bathroom behavior was due to a bad attitude/bad intentions? How did they eliminate other alternatives? I have rose-colored glasses of course, but one possibility might be that an employee's medication is off, or it's dementia or... some type of mental issue...how do they assume it's of ill intent? Just curious. Thanks.
